

Which eLearning Guild conference is right for me?

We have a number of events that happen throughout the year, but they're not all identical. Each conference has its own unique angle on L&D, so it's worth considering what kind of content you're looking for to help you choose the conferences that you'll get the most out of.

Sharing What Works

If you're looking for practical, "use on Monday" content, then this is the event for you. The content at Learning Solutions will help you find immediate solutions to the challenges you face.

With the included Ecosystem sessions, this conference is also a great fit if you're looking to build your skills in L&D strategy.

Exploring What's Trending

When you're looking to dive deep on the hottest topics in L&D, FocusOn Learning is the event to be at. With focuses that change year to year, this conference helps you stay on top of our industry's trends.

It's perfect if you're just getting started with one of the topics featured at the event, and also if you're experienced in those trends and are looking for more advanced content you can't find elsewhere.

How VR, AR, and More Impact L&D

The technology to support augmented, virtual, and expanded reality experiences is evolving at an increasing rate. But how can we use it for L&D in a meaningful and effective way?

If you want to find out more about what the potential is for this new technology—and also experience numerous hands-on demonstrations of it—Realities360 is the conference you'll want to be at.

Shaping What's Next

Learning technology is constantly changing. DevLearn is a forward-leaning event that helps you learn to use the technology that's at the cutting edge of our field.

When you're looking for content that will help you understand the newest technology available and be ready for the innovations coming our way in the future, this is where you'll want to be.
